dynamic forces are linked to the cultural deterioration and collapse of Ancient Greece and Rome, Imperial Spain, and Great Britain. Specific chapters are devoted to stagnation of Western civilization, Asian and Islamic resurgence, deterioration of the American culture, and ecological degradation of North America's largest estuary, the Chesapeake Bay, collateral damage of socio-economic profitability. The characteristics of America's current cultural deterioration parallel those of previous great civilizations. These include abuses of wealth and energy resources, excessive individual and national debt, lack of cultural civility, discipline, integrity, and ethics; unaffordable medical, escalating income and wealth disparities; unresolved crises in health care and public education; and stiffening cultural complexity and bureaucracy. Themes include the underlying principles responsible for the eventual deterioration of all known civilizations, the basis for the recurring, sequential periodicity of civilization success and failure, and the roles and significance of interludes and relapses in civilization growth, decay, and rebirth. Addressing these themes necessitates the integration of the academic disciplines of history, sociology, economics, and science, reflecting human nature and socio-economic and political realities that fundamentally and continuously alter human values, priorities, and behavior, thus creating human history.

The Political Attitudes of Divided European Citizens - Christian Lahusen 2020-11-03 This book reveals the significant impact of the European integration process on the political thinking of European citizens. With close attention to the interrelation between social and political divisions, it shows that an integrated Europe promotes consensus but also propagates growing dissent among its citizens, with both objective inequalities and the subjective perception of these inequalities fueling political dissent. Based on original data sets developed from two EU-funded projects across eight and nine European countries, the volume demonstrates the important role played by the social structure of European society in conditioning political attitudes and preferences. It shows, in particular, that Europeans are highly sensitive to unequal living conditions between European countries, thus affecting their political support of national politics and the European Union. As such, it will appeal to scholars of sociology and politics with interests in Europe and the European Union, European integration and political sociology.
